ROBERTO DAÑINO LEAVES ICSID

At the end of January 2006, Roberto Dañino resigned from the post of Senior Vice President and General Counsel, World Bank, and Secretary-General, ICSID. Mr. Dañino, a Peruvian national, was unanimously elected as Secretary-General by the Administrative Council of ICSID in 2003. Prior to joining ICSID and the World Bank, Mr. Dañino served as Prime Minister of Peru and its Ambassador to the United States, following a career as a corporate lawyer both in the United States and in Peru.

During his tenure at ICSID, Mr. Dañino embarked on several initiatives to improve the Centre’s services and to address current challenges. These initiatives included the Centre’s first ever client survey as well as a review of the framework for ICSID arbitration, which subsequently led to the issuance of amendments to the arbitration rules of the Centre. Besides engaging in a broad dialogue with government and non-governmental audiences on how to improve the rules for ICSID arbitration and proposing new areas for future development of the institution, Mr. Dañino placed emphasis on promoting conciliation and mediation as an alternative means for investor-State dispute settlement in suitable cases. Mr. Dañino made it a point to diversify the pool of ICSID arbitrators to include a greater number of women and developing country nationals.

During Mr. Dañino’s time as ICSID Secretary-General, the Centre’s caseload increased significantly. At the conclusion of Mr. Dañino’s tenure at ICSID, there were a record number of over one hundred cases pending, more than half of all cases ever registered with ICSID since its establishment in 1966.

As of February 1, 2006, Scott B. White, a U.S. national, who has served as the Bank’s Deputy General Counsel since 2003, was appointed as Acting Vice President and General Counsel, World Bank, and Acting Secretary-General, ICSID. Margrete Stevens, a Danish national who has worked at the Centre since 1989, will serve as Acting Lead Counsel for ICSID.

OECD/ICSID/UNCTAD SYMPOSIUM—MAKING THE MOST OF INTERNATIONAL INVESTMENT AGREEMENTS: A COMMON AGENDA

DISPUTES BEFORE THE CENTRE

Since July 1, 2005, the Centre has registered fifteen new cases. Two of these were Additional Facility rules proceedings which were brought to ICSID under the Investment Chapter of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Another case involved an investment contract between the parties concerned. The remaining twelve proceedings were initiated under the investor-State dispute settlement provisions of bilateral investment treaties. These new registrations bring to 199 the total number of cases registered by the Centre by the end of December 31, 2005. Also during the same period, the Centre registered two applications by parties seeking post-award remedies.

Six proceedings were concluded in this period. These include four arbitration proceedings, one interpretation proceeding and one annulment proceeding. The arbitral tribunal in one proceeding rendered its award. Two of the arbitration proceedings were discontinued at the request of a party. A further arbitration proceeding and an annulment case were discontinued at the joint request of the parties. Also during this period, the tribunal in an interpretation proceeding issued a decision on the claimant’s application for interpretation of the arbitral award.

In addition, ICSID tribunals issued decisions on jurisdiction in four cases during the period under review.

ICSID administered 107 proceedings in the second half of 2005. Additionally, the Centre administered four proceedings conducted under the rules of the United Nations Commission on Trade Law (UNCITRAL), and five proceedings conducted under the NAFTA and the UNCITRAL rules.

THE ROLE OF ADR IN INVESTOR-STATE DISPUTE SETTLEMENT: THE ICSID EXPERIENCE

By Ucheora Onwuamaegbu, Senior Counsel, ICSID

A paper presented at the 22nd AAA/ICSID/ICC Joint Colloquium on International Arbitration held in New York on November 18, 2005

INTRODUCTION

Without getting into the debate as to whether the concept of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) includes “arbitration,” the purpose here is to look at the mechanisms, aside from arbitration, available to governments and foreign investors at the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID or the Centre) and to consider whether there is a potential role for another such mechanism.

Access to the ICSID system of dispute settlement is by consent of the parties to the dispute. Increasingly, such consent can be found in treaties that promote and protect investments. The relevant treaty provisions for the settlement of disputes between governments and foreign investors tend to include a “cooling-off period,” within which parties are to attempt to settle their disputes amicably. Such provisions can be found in investment contracts between the investor and the government; in local laws of investment importing countries; and, more commonly these days, in treaties for the promotion and protection of investment to which the host State of the investment and or the investor’s home State is a party.

Although rarely specified as such in those instruments, the reference to amicable settlement could be interpreted to cover resolution by any of the different ADR mechanisms that are available.

MECHANISMS AVAILABLE AT ICSID

ICSID is recognized as an institution for the resolution, by arbitration, of investment disputes between governments and nationals of other countries. Fact-finding and conciliation, the other mechanisms available at ICSID, are often unnoticed.

The ICSID Rules of Procedure for Conciliation Proceedings (Conciliation Rules) were adopted in 1967, at the same time as the ICSID Arbitration Rules, for the resolution by conciliation of investment disputes between an investor from an ICSID member State and another such member State. The ICSID Additional Facility Conciliation Rules were adopted in 1978 for the conciliation of disputes where either the State party to the dispute or the home State of the investor is not a member of ICSID or where the dispute does not directly arise from an investment. Also adopted in 1978 were the ICSID Additional Facility Fact-Finding Rules.

Therefore, aside from arbitration, there are three other mechanisms available at ICSID for use of governments and foreign investors.

Of the 104 cases pending at ICSID as at November 18, 2005, 103 are arbitration cases, whereas only one is a conciliation case. Indeed, only 5 out of the 198 cases registered to date at ICSID have been conciliation cases registered under the Convention. None of them has been registered under the Additional Facility Rules. Moreover, no cases have been brought to the Centre under the Fact-Finding Rules, after nearly thirty years of their being in existence.

a) ICSID’s Fact-Finding (Additional Facility) Rules

According to the Introductory Notes published with the first edition of ICSID’s Additional Facility Rules, fact-finding, under those Rules, is a process for preventing, rather than settling disputes. Aaron Broches, who was ICSID Secretary-General when the Rules were introduced in 1978, noted that the process would provide parties with an impartial assessment of facts which, if accepted by them, would prevent differences of views relating to specific factual issues in the course of a long-term relationship from escalating to legal disputes.

Article 1 of the Fact-Finding Rules provides that the process is available to any State or national of a State wishing to institute an inquiry, to examine and report on facts. There is, therefore, no requirement that either party is a member of ICSID or a national of such a member State, but there is a requirement of consent of the parties to the procedure.
Among the other sixteen articles of the Fact-Finding Rules are provisions for the fact-finding proceedings to be conducted by a committee comprising of a sole commissioner, or any uneven number of commissioners, who shall be independent of the parties, as well as provisions for the conduct of the proceeding. The Rules envisage that there could be oral and written submissions by the parties and their witnesses; and that the cost of the proceeding would be borne equally by the parties. Finally, the parties may adapt the Rules as they see fit.

In answering the question as to why the Fact-Finding Rules have not been used, it may be insightful to look at why they were introduced in the first place. Again, we turn to the Introductory Notes which state that “[t]he reason for including fact-finding in the Additional Facility was the need perceived in both private and public circles for fact-finding proceedings in the ‘pre-dispute’ stage.” After nearly thirty years of non-use, could it be the perception of need considered to exist at the time the Rules were adopted was wrong or that the need simply disappeared?

It is more likely, however, that the need still exists but that the process has not received adequate attention. Indeed, since no proceedings have been brought to ICSID so far under the fact-finding mechanism, the fact of its existence tends to be overlooked.

Another reason for the non-use of ICSID fact-finding procedures could be related to the fact that parties generally do not favor processes that involve time and money with no binding result. Article 15(4) of the Fact-Finding Rules provides that “[t]he Report shall not contain any recommendations to the parties and shall not have the character of an award”; and Article 16 provides that “[t]he Parties shall be entirely free as to the effect to be given to the Report” of the Fact-Finding Committee, making it clear that the findings of the Committee shall not be binding on the parties. This is similar to the effect of ICSID Conciliation Reports, which are equally non-binding.

b) Conciliation at ICSID
The Executive Directors of the World Bank, in their 1965 Report on the ICSID Convention, refer to the basic distinction between “the process of conciliation which seeks to bring parties to agreement and that of arbitration which aims at a binding determination of the dispute by the Tribunal.”

Indeed, ICSID Conciliation Rule 30 only requires the Report of the Conciliation Commission, at the end of the process, to note the issues in dispute and record that the parties have reached agreement, where applicable. If on the other hand it appears to the Commission, at any time during the process, that there is no likelihood of agreement between the parties, the Commission’s Report is simply required to note the submission of the dispute to conciliation and to record the failure of the parties to reach an agreement.

Although the aim of conciliation is agreement, the non-binding nature of the Report upon conclusion of proceedings has often been cited as one of the reasons why parties have tended to shy away from ICSID conciliation, especially, since the process could involve as much time and, possibly, comparable expense as an arbitral proceeding which would conclude with a binding award.

However, a look at the limited number of conciliation cases so far filed at the Centre reveals a trend that suggests that the procedure is well suited to certain types of cases for which arbitration would be too adversarial, but which require a process that is clearly defined and documented. These are typically cases in which the parties are engaged in an ongoing long term project, involving significant amounts in sunk costs, where it is necessary to resolve disputes while the project is continuing. Disputes in oil and gas exploration projects, particularly, come to mind — as do mining and long term infrastructure projects.

Another reason that has been cited for the limited use made of ICSID conciliation is that potential users are not aware of its existence. Consequently, the Centre has recently begun to remind parties of the existence of the mechanism.

c) Possibility of Mediation at ICSID
Recognizing the potential value to parties, ICSID has been looking into the establishment of a further mechanism, to be called “mediation,” either alone or in conjunction with the other organizations of the World Bank Group. But, with such little use being made of the other ICSID mechanisms, aside from arbitration, is there a role for yet another mechanism? To answer this we first need to look at what we mean by “mediation” for purposes of ICSID proceedings.

The terms “mediation” and “conciliation” tend to be used interchangeably to mean a system of dispute settlement, in which a neutral third party assists the parties in reaching a solution of their own accord, as opposed to one that is imposed on them by a third party. An example can be found in the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Conciliation (2002).
In their book, The Law and Practice of International Commercial Arbitration, Redfern and Hunter note that although the terms may be used interchangeably, a distinction could be drawn in the international law field, where:

[A] mediator is usually taken to be a person… whose role is to help [parties] reach an agreed settlement… He will try to bring the parties together in order that they may themselves achieve a compromise solution. On the other hand, a conciliator will himself draw up and propose terms of an agreement designed to represent what is, in his view, a fair compromise of a dispute after having discussed the case with the parties.

Black’s Law Dictionary (seventh edition), further, presents possible distinctions between “conciliation” as “nonbinding arbitration” and “mediation” as “assisted negotiation.” The process of conciliation as presently offered by ICSID is akin to nonbinding arbitration, whereas what we seek to introduce is more similar to a system of assisted negotiation.

Such mediation would be an informal, voluntary process allowing parties to discuss their differences confidentially with the help of an independent third party, who may or may not have subjectmatter expertise, with a view to arriving at an amicable resolution of the dispute. The process would be devoid of the rigidity of systems such as arbitration or national court litigation, or even the form of conciliation presently offered by ICSID. In effect, the Centre would simply be facilitating communication between the parties with a reduced risk of either party losing face.

The process could, of course, be without prejudice to the rights of the parties to resort to other forms of dispute resolution. It could, indeed, be conducted alongside arbitration proceedings, the main advantage of which would be that the resulting settlement agreement could ultimately be incorporated into an award of the arbitral tribunal, pursuant to ICSID Arbitration Rule 43(2).

In one ICSID case, the President of the Tribunal at the request of the parties acted as mediator for a few months to assist the parties in negotiations. The parties eventually agreed on some issues and asked the Tribunal to decide on the other issues. This unique experience could suggest that there may be benefits to parties of such assisted negotiations, particularly, in terms of cost and time savings.

Another indication of a possible need in this regard is the increasing percentage of ICSID cases that are discontinued following settlement. As at November 2005, seven out of the previous 10 arbitration cases concluded at the Centre were concluded in settlement without the need for a tribunal to impose a binding solution on the parties. This trend should also be considered.

Our experience with the Conciliation and Fact-Finding Rules has shown that the existence of need and potential benefits is not sufficient to ensure that the facility will be used. Two factors immediately come to mind as possible limitations on the use of the mechanism, and they are as follows: First is the fact that some governments would be disinclined to be involved in mechanisms that are not totally transparent, especially since such discussions and negotiations would usually take place in private, and the general trend in the resolution of disputes involving governments is now towards increased openness. Second is the problem of identifying the right persons who would be able to negotiate effectively on behalf of a government, and be able to commit the government to a settlement.

While the solutions to these issues would vary from case to case, it would appear that the parties would rely more on the use of the good offices of the Centre if they wished to convene or conduct the relevant discussions.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, it may be suggested that despite the fact that little or no use has so far been made of the conciliation and fact-finding mechanisms at ICSID, there could well be a role for such mechanisms in the types of cases brought to the Centre, as there may well be a potential role for mediation or assisted negotiation in such cases.
The symposium, held at the OECD headquarters in Paris on December 12, 2005, explored specific issues of jurisdictional and substantive nature which parties face in investor-State dispute settlement proceedings. The symposium also discussed possible avenues to improve the system of international investment arbitration and examined ways of possible co-operation among international organizations and institutions active in this field.

Richard Hecklinger, Deputy Secretary-General of OECD, Roberto Dañino, then Secretary-General of ICSID and James Zhan, Chief of the International Arrangements Section, Division on Investment, Technology and Enterprise Development of UNCTAD reflected in the opening session on investment agreements and the growing number of investment related disputes.

Following the opening addresses, the first session concentrated on the topic “Investor-State dispute settlement — balancing investors’ rights and public interests.” At the outset, Professor Christoph Schreuer of the University of Vienna provided an assessment of a decade of increasing awareness of investment arbitration and considerable activity. The second session, chaired by Manfred Schekulin, Chair of the OECD Investment Committee, dealt with main jurisdictional challenges arising from investment disputes. Barton Legum, Counsel at Debevoise & Plimpton in Paris, discussed the definitions of the terms investment and investor. Subsequently, Professor Emmanuel Gaillard, Head of the International Arbitration Group of Shearman & Sterling in Paris, addressed the issue of contractual claims and claims under investment treaties and the notion of the umbrella clause. The presentation of Professor Giorgio Sacerdoti of Bocconi University in Milan dealt with parallel and multiple proceedings, whilst examining how a potential risk of inconsistent decisions could be measured.

The following panel focused on substantive issues arising from investment disputes. Daniel Price, Head of the International Arbitration Group at Sidley Austin LLP. in Washington, D.C., Jan Paulsson, Head of the International Arbitration Group of Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer in Paris, Horacio Grigera Naón, Director of the International Arbitration Programme at American University, Washington College of Law in Washington, D.C., Professor Rudolf Dolzer of the University of Bonn, and Dan Magraw, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Center for International Environmental Law (CIEL), discussed issues related to fair and equitable treatment, indirect expropriation, most-favored-nation treatment and national treatment.

Chaired by Margrethe Stevens, Acting Lead Counsel of ICSID, the first afternoon session explored possible improvements to investor-State dispute settlement. Meg Kinnear, General Counsel and Director General of the Trade Law Bureau (LT), a joint unit of the Canadian Departments of Justice and International Trade, emphasized the need for additional transparency and third party participation in investor-State disputes, whereas Louis Alberto Gonzalez García, Director of the Office of the Legal Counsel for International Trade Negotiations at the Ministry of Economy of Mexico, considered the consolidation of multiple claims.

The enforcement of arbitral awards was subsequently discussed by Makhdum Ali Khan, Attorney General of Pakistan, by Professor Chen An, Chairman of the Chinese Society of International Economic Law and by Jernej Secolec, Secretary of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL).

The final session of this one-day symposium was devoted to future perspectives of investor-State arbitration. James Zhan of UNCTAD moderated the discussion which focused on technical assistance and capacity building, lessons learned from experience, while also discussing possible ways for international organizations concerned to contribute to capacity building in the field of international investment arbitration. The panel was composed of Rohan Perera, Legal Counsel at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Sri Lanka, Anne-Marie Whitesell, Secretary General of the International Court of Arbitration at the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC), Anna Joubin-Bret, Senior Legal Advisor and Technical Assistance Coordinator, Division on Investment, Technology and Enterprise Development of UNCTAD and Wesley Scholz, Vice-Chair of the OECD Investment Committee.

ICSID will participate as observer in the forthcoming OECD Investment Committee meeting which will take place in April 2006. At this meeting, the Committee will discuss further proposals for improvement of the system of investor-State dispute settlement.
UPDATE ON THE AMENDMENTS TO THE ICSID RULES AND REGULATIONS

In December 2005, the ICSID Secretariat submitted to the members of the ICSID Administrative Council for vote amendments to the ICSID Rules and Regulations. The outcome of the voting process, once concluded, will be reported on in the following issues of News from ICSID.

The proposed amendments are the result of extensive consultations by the Secretariat with governments, arbitration experts and business and civil society groups. The amendments reflect, in particular, comments received in response to the Secretariat’s Working Paper of May 12, 2005, on suggested changes to the ICSID Rules and Regulations; and the Secretariat’s Discussion Paper of October 22, 2004, on possible improvements of the framework for ICSID arbitration (both documents are available on the Centre’s website at www.worldbank.org/icsid).

ICSID PUBLICATIONS

The Spring 2005 issue of the ICSID Review — Foreign Investment Law Journal (Volume 20, No. 1) was published recently. The issue features an article by Andrew Newcombe on the boundaries of regulatory expropriation in international law. The second article, written by Dana H. Freyer and David Herlihy, discusses how most-favored-nation clauses interact with dispute resolution provisions in bilateral investment treaties, with an emphasis on relevant ICSID jurisprudence. The issue also reproduces the text of the International Institute for Sustainable Development (IISD) Model International Agreement on Investment for Sustainable Development by Howard Mann, Konrad von Molke, Luke Eric Peterson and Aaron Cosbey, which is accompanied by an Introductory Note by Howard Mann.

Three jurisdictional decisions issued in ICSID proceedings are also reprinted in this issue. These decisions comprise the decision on jurisdiction in Salini Costruttori S.p.A. and Italstrade S.p.A. v. The Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan (ICSID Case No. ARB/02/13), the decision on jurisdiction and dissenting opinion issued in Tokios Tokeles v. Ukraine (ICSID Case No. ARB/02/18), and the decision on jurisdiction issued in Plama Consortium v. Republic of Bulgaria (ICSID Case No. ARB/03/24).

The ICSID Review — Foreign Investment Law Journal, which appears twice annually, is available on a subscription basis from the Johns Hopkins University Press, Journals Publishing Division, 2715 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland, 21218-4363, U.S.A.; Tel.: 410–516–6987; Fax: 410–516–6968. Annual subscription rates are US$78 for subscribers with a mailing address in a member country of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development and US$39 for others.

In the Fall of 2005, the Centre also published new releases for its two loose-leaf services. The Investment Laws of the World collection was expanded by a recent release containing new or revised investment legislation passed by Cambodia, Croatia, Djibouti, Kyrgyz Republic, Mali, Senegal and Syria. This twovolume set now features investment legislation of 132 countries, while also providing contact details of the main governmental agencies in charge of the promotion and protection of foreign investment in the featured countries. The Centre also compiled a new release for its nine volume loose-leaf collection of Investment Treaties. This release contains the texts of twenty bilateral investment treaties concluded by some twenty-four countries in the period of 1993–2005.

Investment Laws of the World (ten volumes) and Investment Treaties (nine volumes) are available from Oceana Publications, Inc., a division of the Oxford University Press, 75 Main Street, Dobbs Ferry, N.Y. 10522, U.S.A.; Tel.: 914–693–8100; Fax: 914–693–0402 at US$1,690 for both sets, US$995 for the ten Investment Laws of the World volumes only and US$695 for the nine Investment Treaties volumes only.
NEW DESIGNATIONS TO THE ICSID PANELS OF CONCILIATORS AND OF ARBITRATORS
DURING THE PERIOD OF JULY 1 – DECEMBER 31, 2005

In accordance with the ICSID Convention, the Centre maintains a Panel of Conciliators and a Panel of Arbitrators. Each ICSID Contracting State may designate to each Panel up to four persons who will serve for a renewable period of six years. The Panels furnish to parties to proceedings under the ICSID Convention a convenient and reliable source from which they may choose to select conciliators or arbitrators when constituting a conciliation commission or an arbitral tribunal. In addition, when the Chairman of the ICSID Administrative Council is called upon to appoint conciliators, arbitrators or ad hoc committee members under Articles 30, 38 or 52 of the Convention, his appointees must be drawn from the Panels. ICSID continuously reminds numerous Contracting States to make or renew designations to the ICSID Panels.

During the period July – December 2005, the governments of Azerbaijan, Chile, Guyana, Lebanon, Norway, Slovak Republic and Switzerland made designations to the ICSID Panels. The names of the recently designated appointees are provided below. A complete list of members of the Panels is available on the ICSID website.

TWENTY-SECOND ICSID/AAA/ICC JOINT COLLOQUIUM ON INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION

Since 1983, the American Arbitration Association (AAA), the International Court of Arbitration of the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) and ICSID have co-sponsored a series of colloquia to discuss various topics pertinent to international arbitration. The 22nd in this series of colloquia was hosted by the American Arbitration Association and held in New York on November 18, 2005.

Some 180 legal practitioners, academics and representatives of arbitration institutions participated in the event, which was opened by Richard Naimark, Senior Vice President of the AAA’s International Centre for Dispute Resolution (ICDR). Robert Briner, Chairman of the ICC International Court of Arbitration, Roberto Dañino, Secretary-General of ICSID, and William K. Slate II, President and Chief Executive Officer of ICDR and AAA, then provided an overview on recent institutional developments and activities of the three institutions. Subsequently, Ucheora Onwuamaegbu of ICSID, John M. Townsend of Hughes Hubbard & Reed LLP and Peter M. Walrich of Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle LLP, focused on current trends in the use, growth and promotion of alternate mechanisms in international dispute resolution. In particular, the panel, which was moderated by John J. Kerr of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett LLP discussed the use of dispute resolution boards, similar mediation practices and the potential role for mediation in ICSID proceedings.

Impartiality and independence in arbitration was the topic of the following session moderated by C. Mark Baker of Fullbrights & Jaworski LLP. This panel, composed of Donald Francis Donovan of Debevoise & Plimpton LLP, Nicolas Gamboa-Morales of Gamboa, Chalela, Gamboa & Useche and Anne/Marie Whitesell, Secretary General of the ICC International Court of Arbitration, dealt with institutional practices regarding impartiality and independence of arbitrators, taking into account the International Bar Association’s Guidelines on Conflicts of Interest in International Arbitration, the AAA/ABA Code of Ethics and contemporary trends and practices in disclosure, challenge and the selection of arbitrators.

During the interactive luncheon session, David W. Rivkin of Debevoise and Plimpton LLP, Lucy Reed of Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer and Gerald Aksen, retired partner of Thelen Reid & Priest LLP, answered questions from the audience on emerging and key issues in the field of international arbitration. The discussion was lead by William K. Slate II.

The afternoon panel, chaired by Brian J. Casey of Baker & McKenzie and consisting of Louis B. Kimmelman of O’Melveny & Myers LLP, Constantine Parasides of Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer and Philippe Sands of University College London as discussants, focused on public policy issues in international arbitration cases and on proceedings involving bilateral investment treaties. The session also considered questions related to the review of arbitral awards by domestic courts and its implications for the future of arbitration. It was followed by concluding remarks of Richard Naimark.

The 23rd Joint ICSID/AAA/ICC Colloquium on International Arbitration will be hosted by ICSID in Washington, D.C. on November 17, 2006. A one-day symposium, organized by the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA) in co-operation with ICSID, will take place on the day after the Joint Colloquium, that is on November 18, 2006. Further details on the Colloquium and the Symposium will appear in the next issue of News from ICSID and will be available on the Centre’s website in due course.
During a seminar on Managing Investment Disputes, ICSID staff provided training on the ICSID dispute settlement system for government officials from Central and Latin America and the Caribbean. The seminar, which was jointly organized by the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States (OAS) and the Secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in co-operation with American University’s Washington College of Law while also supported by the Canadian International Development Agency, took place in Washington, D.C. from November 3-11, 2005. Over two and a half days of the training, three ICSID staff explained to the participants the procedure for initiating ICSID arbitration and conciliation proceedings, clarified the role of the ICSID Secretariat in the course of a proceeding and illustrated jurisdictional requirements under the ICSID Convention on the basis of case studies.

In December 2005, Roberto Dañino, then Secretary-General of ICSID, and Karl-Heinz Böckstiegel, Chairman of the German Institution of Arbitration (DIS), signed a memorandum on general agreements between the two institutions.

As foreseen in Article 63[a] of the Washington Convention, ICSID conciliation and arbitration proceedings may, if the parties so agree, be held at the seat of any appropriate institution, whether private or public, with which ICSID may make arrangements for this purpose. The Additional Facility rules of ICSID also allow for the possibility that proceedings under those rules may be hosted by other institutions.

In 1968, ICSID concluded the first arrangement of this kind by signing a memorandum of general arrangements with the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague. Over the years, ICSID has entered into similar co-operation arrangements with other arbitral institutions, including the Regional Centre for Commercial Arbitration in Kuala Lumpur, the Cairo Regional Centre for International Commercial Arbitration, the Australian Centre for International Commercial Arbitration at Melbourne, the Australian Commercial Disputes Centre at Sydney, the Singapore International Arbitration Centre, the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) Commercial Arbitration Centre located in Manama, Bahrain, and the Lagos Regional Centre for International Commercial Arbitration.

The agreement of general arrangements between ICSID and the German Institution of Arbitration provides that, if so requested by the parties to ICSID proceedings, all or any part of an ICSID conciliation or arbitration proceeding may be held at the Frankfurt International Arbitration Center, which was recently established by DIS and the Frankfurt Chamber of Industry and Commerce.
The Institute of Transnational Arbitration (ITA), founded in 1986 as a division of The Center for American and International Law (formerly the Southwestern Legal Foundation), will be hosting its Seventeenth Annual International Commercial Arbitration Workshop on June 15, 2006, at the Westin Galleria Hotel in Dallas, Texas, U.S.A. Co-chaired by Jack J. Coe, Jr. (Pepperdine University, Malibu, California), Barton Legum (Debevoise & Plimpton, Paris) and Margrete Stevens (ICSID, Washington, D.C.), the workshop will address contemporary issues of investment treaty arbitration under the auspices of ICSID.
